Thought for the Month: Bill

It is said that you have reached middle age when your broad mind and narrow waist change place.

It is a sad time in life when our minds narrow to the extent that we feel that there is nothing new for us to discover, nothing new worth considering.

Sometimes we confuse this with the feeling that we have “arrived”, we have achieved what we set out to achieve, and yet it is a very small step from that to closing down our openness to what is new.

Recently I was reading the first chapter of Genesis and something struck me.

We read that God created the dry ground, the land and the sea....and God saw that it was good.

Then God created plants and trees and all kinds of vegetation....and God saw that it was good. God then created the stars and the lights in the sky separating light and darkness....and God saw that it was good.

Moving on we find that God created all the living creatures that flew and those in the sea....and God saw that it was good.

In the next verse we find that God created the creatures on the land....and God saw that it was good.

And finally God created man to rule over everything.....and God said.....?

It is true that God surveyed everything that He had made and saw that it was good...but what was the problem with man?

To understand this we need to consider the meaning of the word “good”...it is a Hebrew word which means “complete”.

When God created the land and sea, the night and day, the vegetation and the living things they were complete, but man was not complete because man had potential...there was room for development...there was room for growth through his relationship with God.

As we live our lives...as we grow in faith...may we be spared from feeling that we have arrived, learned all we can, understood all we need to understand and achieved all there is to achieve.

God created us to develop...to grow. In a sense we are created incomplete and we come to completion by co-operating with our Creator to find our potential and true fulfilment in life.
